Frequently Asked Questions

What to report?

Concerns about safety or security of yourself or others, including violent, threatening, intimidating, and distressing behavior.

What if I'm not sure where to report?

We have multiple reporting paths to help you get relevant help faster. We will coordinate as needed to ensure the right offices are involved, no matter which path you choose.

What happens after a report?

Individuals experiencing the behavior will be contacted to connect them with resources available at the university or in the community. Depending on the situation, other measures may also be taken to address safety or security of individuals or the community.

What kind of help is available?

Depending on the situation and the individual's needs, resources may include adjustments to school or work schedules or locations, diversion of email or phone messages, safety planning and resources, threat and security assessments, counseling, or health care.
